Juler Group Contractor Management Group oversees the risk management of construction projects utilizing contractors and subcontractors, and ensures those employees, contractors, insurers, financiers and the public keep the Health, Safety and Environmental (HSE) programs in plain site.

Juler Group construction HSE management teams manage all phases of an effective Health, Safety & Environmental program including pre-construction preparation, pre-construction conferencing, construction activities surveillance, and violation communication and reporting. This includes ensuring site-specific HSE plans are developed, communicated and stakeholders are trained on the details and importance of adhering to these plans. Juler Group reviews all governing documents to ensure that Construction Management Contracts and Construction Safety Programs are in agreement, that line-management changes are debriefed and reviewed on governing safety documents. Total Quality Management processes are followed to ensure smooth and effective documentation, communication and review.

Juler Group Environmental Hazardous Material specialists aid in the determination of the soil, groundwater and vapor characteristics, assessment of worker safety and public exposure concerns, determination of the handling or disposal requirements for any contaminated media unearthed during construction, recommendation of a preventive action plan to ensure the problem is not aggravated and to avoid or minimize department liability, and determination of the requirements necessary so that construction may continue.
